Statement

I am a Doctoral Candidate at the KDI School of Public Policy and Management and a Development Policy Expert at ImpactAI, the World Bank. My research focuses on the political economy of conflict, development economics, and state capacity building. I am interested in exploring the causes and consequences of terrorism, including counter-terrorism strategies, education, labor markets, health, and electoral outcomes. In addition, I am interested in examining the spillover effects of state capacity building through digitization.
